

incredible fun

➡ bonfire sparks bonds

Campus events unified students and offered days and nights of incredible fun. Students and faculty alike looked forward to the bonfire in the middle of September, and the night consisted of performances that thrilled the crowd. The cheerleaders, band, and Redline elicited ecstatic cheers from fans as rhythmic stand tunes rang out across campus. Sausage dogs were thrust into the fire, and marshmallows were roasted to golden perfection. The massive flames and comforting puffs of smoke made students feel at home among their peers.

The annual transfer fair gave students the opportunity to meet with recruiters representing colleges and universities across the state. Recruiters helped students to get an idea of what the next two years of their lives would be like after transferring to a university, and pupils appreciated the guidance provided by the college representatives. Students obtained knowledge on the various universities in the state and felt closer to their future schools by the end of the fair.

The blood drive brought many donors this year as people gathered at the Workforce Building over a span of three days to give blood. Students felt invigorated at the prospect of saving lives by donating blood, and everyone was eager for his or her turn to become a hero. It was obvious from the huge turnout that students cared immensely for their community.

by Madison VanNess

above: Candace Bryan talks to Ubie, the United Blood Services' mascot; top right: Sydney Gregoire fires up the basketball team during March Madness; bottom right: Alana Lambert, Kristen Monahan, Mississippi University for Women recruiter; and Anna Mabile discuss career options.